INTRODUCTION

Congratulations on your appointment to serve as a public library trustee for your community! You are to be commended for your interest and involvement. Your active participation is needed to help Nevada public libraries grow stronger and increase services to meet the informational, educational and recreational needs of the people of Nevada.

This handbook will serve as a guide to help you get started and become comfortable with your role as a public library trustee. It is designed to provide you with basic information and to be used as a quick reference for helping you do your job in an efficient, effective manner. Think of it as a map by which you can explore the opportunities, responsibilities, and liabilities of serving as a public library trustee.

All public library boards are bound by a variety of laws that govern their policies and operating procedures. You will find copies of Nevada Revised Statutes (NRS) Chapter 379, Public Libraries contained in this manual.

While all Nevada public libraries share legal authority described in NRS, each library serves the unique needs of the local community. Please use this handbook to develop your individual role and participation as a public library trustee.

CHAPTER 1. Take Time to Learn the Job

This job deserves your very best effort.

It is distinctly an honor to serve on the board of a Nevada public library. Board members set the direction for a very important service. You will govern the expenditure of public funds and be responsible for many thousands of dollars of library assets. When you accepted the position, you also accepted the responsibility to expend time and effort to learn, and then to do the job. The community has entrusted you with this responsibility. Your peers believe you have the skills to govern the library and they trust you to do that. You are therefore referred to as a trustee.

What a privilege it is to sit in a seat so powerful that you make decisions that affect the lives of so many people who use the library now and many more who will benefit from a good library far into the future.

However, being a library board member is not all honor and privilege. It's hard work and sometimes you'll have to look hard to find the rewards for your efforts. Becoming a good trustee is an acquired skill that must be learned, honed to a sharp edge and regularly updated.

You have two major tasks facing you as a board member. The first is to govern the library. Among other things, you will plan and monitor finances and services and evaluate the progress of the library. The second major task is equally important. You must become a part of the board team and keep it functioning at optimum level. If you and the other board members don't do a good job of building and maintaining your skills of teamwork and good board membership, you won't be able to accomplish the first task --- governing the library.

The intent of this manual is to help you with both tasks.

As you gain experience on the board, you will continue to learn facts, statistics, history, procedures and a thousand other things. But first things first:

- Get to know the other people who serve on the board with you - not just their names, but who they are. What are their interests and concerns? What motivates them to serve on the library board? Team building begins by knowing your teammates. Governance cannot happen without team effort.
- Get to know the director, the other part of the board team. There must be a high level of trust between those who govern the library and the person they have chosen to manage. Board members and the director form the board team.
- Recognize that this job deserves your very best effort. The governance of the library demands the best job you can do. It will require time and effort on your part.
- Continue to learn. Ongoing development activities should be part of the plan for every board and every board member. Attend state and national library conferences, take part in board development workshops, read pertinent literature about library services and governance of the library.
- Find out where to go for answers to your questions. Your best defense against being totally lost in the early stage of your term as a board member is to know the people and resources that will give you quick answers to tough questions.

The director and other board members are the best sources for learning about the library. This manual is designed to be a guide to the basics of good board membership and will answer many of your questions.

You will continue to learn about the library and how it works for as long as you remain on the board. But some information is needed from the beginning. Here are some questions to which trustees should know the answers:

What are the mission, goals and objectives of the library?

When was this library organized and what is the service area?

How many citizens does this library serve?

How big is the annual budget and what are the total assets of this library?

What facilities and equipment does the library own or rent?

What is the total indebtedness of this library?

Where does the money come from to finance this library?

How many staff does the library have and what do they do?

What local/state/national legislative issues could affect the library?

What are the major problems faced by the library?

Your orientation should include, but not be limited to, information provided in these documents:

CHAPTER 2. The Board Member's Duties and Responsibilities

The library board is responsible for the library and all that happens in it.

That may be a strong statement, but it is both a legal and practical way of looking at the job you accepted as board member. Even though the board delegates the actual day-to-day operation of the library to professional, paid staff, the board never gives up ultimate bottom-line responsibility for the success or failure of the library. To manage that responsibility, the board has six major duties:

- Set Policies
- Hire and evaluate the director
- Plan for the future of the Library
- Submit budgets and monitor finances
- Monitor and evaluate the overall effectiveness of the Library
- Advocate for the library in the community

(See statutory powers and duties of Nevada library trustees in NRS 379.025. A Job Description and Minimum Standards for Nevada Library Trustees, based on the statute, are included in the Appendix).

Set Policies

The board must first establish broad but clear policies about what the library will do and how it will be done. Policy is a carefully designed, broadly stated, written guideline for actions and decisions of the library. It is a governing principle formally adopted by the board.

The board begins with the mission statement and writes policies that outline parameters of how the library will operate to accomplish its mission. Then the board observes, interprets, evaluates and supports those policies. The board also modifies existing policies and creates new policies as needed to keep the library running well. The board's role in developing library policies is explained further in Chapter 5.

Hire and Evaluate the Director

One of the major responsibilities of the library board is hiring a library director. To ensure that the most qualified candidate is hired, it is critical that the library follow standard hiring procedures.

Before thinking about a new director, a preliminary assessment of the current status of the library should be reviewed. In order to do this, the board needs to discuss the following questions:

- What is the role of the library in the community?
- Have library needs changed? Has the library kept pace?
- What qualifications are needed in the next director?
- What is the reason for the job opening?
- Was the previous director dissatisfied? Why?
- Was the board dissatisfied with the previous director? Why?

A time line should be established to include:

- Appointment of a search committee.
- Review of job description and development of advertisement.
- Date that advertisements will appear and deadline for applications.
- Time period to review applications and to decide on persons to interview.
- Time period for interviews.
- Time period for board to make decision and offer job to candidate.
- Time for candidate to respond and anticipated starting date for the new director.

Chapter 4 has more information on Director responsibilities and evaluation and on hiring a new Director.

Plan for the Future of the Library

Planning in an age when dramatic change in libraries comes almost faster than we can comprehend seems like an exercise in futility. But the fact that change is so rapid is even more reason that every library must have a plan to cope with rapid change and the effects it can have on the library.

Failure to plan is planning to fail. Board members must be visionaries for the library. They must plan as far ahead as five to ten years. The board is generally recognized as the responsible party for planning and the director is responsible for developing strategies to accomplish the goals set by the board. But all planning for the library is a team effort of the board, director and staff.

The library's five year masterplan is like a mark in the sand placed as a reference point to determine if the library is moving ahead, standing still or falling behind. Always be aware of the mission, goals and objectives of the library so that you can accurately measure the progress. The decisions you make as part of the board team will determine progress or lack of progress. See Chapter 10 for a complete discussion of the Planning Process.

Submit Budgets and Monitor Expenditures

Finance is one of the most difficult items you will have to review and monitor, but it doesn't have to be an overwhelming task. Begin your monitoring with careful attention to the budget. The budget is the board's financial plan for the library and deserves your attention. The budget will be prepared by the director and staff and presented to the board for approval. When the budget is presented, board members must ask whatever questions necessary to gain a reasonable understanding of this financial plan, including where the money is coming from and where it will be spent.

Monthly financial reports to the board are the windows used to monitor how well the director and staff is following the financial plan the board approved when they voted on the budget. If you don't understand the reports, ask the director for an explanation. Remember, you don't have to know everything about the finances, just enough to feel comfortable that the money is coming in and going out according to your budget plan.

Financial reports will cover both the revenue side and the expense side of the budget. On the expense side, you should understand what was budgeted, what has been expended to this point, the variance between the spending plan and what is actually being spent, and the reasons for the variances. The same is true for the revenue side. How much money did you anticipate at this point? What has actually come in?

To learn about library finance, new board members should insist on a good orientation about library finance and how to monitor financial status. If the budget is not clear to you, ask questions. If the financial report is not clear to you, ask questions. If the audit report is not clear to you, ask questions. Chapter 6 has more information on library finance.

Monitor and Evaluate Library Effectiveness

The very term "trustee" indicates what the community expects from you. The community puts its trust in you to make sure the library is operating the way it should. It's your job to keep an eye on the progress of the library for the community.

Of course, you can't watch every detail and every activity that takes place in the library, because that would be a full-time job. Board members monitor and evaluate "bottom-line" results.

For example, you cannot and should not be in the library every day monitoring the kind of service provided by library staff. But the board can survey the community to find out the overall satisfaction of those who use the library. That's bottom-line evidence of the work the staff is doing.

Advocate

To be a library advocate is simply to work for the betterment of libraries, or more importantly, for the betterment of library services for citizens. The results can be spectacular-and the rewards great. As a trustee, you are in a unique position to be a library advocate and to place your library in high regard by members of your local community. Because you serve as a volunteer leader of the library, you qualify as a good advocate for the organization. Volunteer board members' motivation is service to the community. Board members are also community leaders and influential in the community, prime qualities for an advocate.

Advocacy is a primary role of a library trustee because you have statutory responsibility for your library's governance and a moral responsibility to better its services. In cementing the relationship between the local community and its public library, you are in a unique position to promote and advance the cause of libraries. Your board is privy to knowledge of how your library works and what it has to offer. You can truly represent the library when working with citizens, the media and local community groups.

One of the main responsibilities of the library board is to obtain adequate financing for the library. Reaching out into your local community to provide the financial support the local library needs has been a hallmark of library trusteeship. This is the kind of advocacy with which trustees are most familiar. Trustees also have a role in other types of advocacy, such as in the legislative process or in working with the media. See Chapter 11 for detailed information on Library Advocacy and Public Relations.

Responsibilities

Additionally, as a library board member, you have the following responsibilities for carrying out the duties listed above.

- Participate actively in board meetings and actions.
- Listen carefully to the board members who are your teammates.
- Respect the opinions of the other board members.
- Respect and support the majority decisions of the board.
- Recognize that all authority is vested in the board when it meets in legal sessions and not with individual board members.
- Be well-informed of relevant issues that may come before the board and call attention to issues that may have an adverse affect on the library.
- Interpret the needs of the community to the library and interpret the action of the library to the community.
- Refer complaints about the library to the proper level on the chain on command.
- Recognize that the board members job is to ensure that the library is well-managed, not to manage the library.
- Represent the whole community to the library and not a particular interest or group, i.e. neighborhood, family, institution, organization.
- Do your best to ensure that the library is well maintained, financially secure, growing and always operating in the best interests of the community.

CHAPTER 3. Board Member Ethics and Liability

As a board member of a public library, you are a public servant.

Beyond the strict legal definition of how board members should conduct themselves, there are board member ethics. The public expects that your performance will always be above question and for the public good, not for your own interest or another special interest. Most professional employees are covered by a code of ethics or standards of practice. The following is a suggested code of ethical conduct [ALTA (Homepage of ALA) (12 May 2003) (online), ala.org, Date accessed 27 May 2003.] for library trustees:

As a member of the library board I will:

- Promote the highest level of library service while observing ethical standards.
- Declare any conflict of interests between my personal life and my position on the library board and avoid voting on issues that appear to be a conflict of interest
- Avoid situations in which personal interests might be served or financial benefits gained at the expense of library users, colleagues or the institution.
- Distinguish clearly in my actions and statements between my personal philosophies and attitudes and those of the institution.
- Respect the confidential nature of library business while being aware of, and in compliance with, the Freedom of Information Act.
- Be prepared to support to the fullest, the efforts of librarians in resisting censorship of library materials by groups or individuals.

Trustees who accept appointment to a library board are expected to perform the duties and responsibilities of Trustee.

As a member of the library board I will not:

- Be critical, in or outside of the board meeting, of fellow board members or their opinions.
- Use any part of the library for my personal advantage or the personal advantage of my friends or relatives.
- Discuss the confidential proceedings of the board outside the board meeting.
- Promise prior to a meeting how I will vote on any issue in the meeting.
- Interfere with the duties of the director or undermine the directors authority.

Ethics in Government

Nevada public library trustees are public officers under NRS 281.4365. As such the Ethics in Government provisions of NRS 281.41 1-NRS 281.671 apply to all trustees. Trustees must be familiar with the Code of Ethical Standards in NRS 281.481

Liability

Legal action may be brought against public officers as individuals or as a whole for accusations of willful or corrupt misconduct in office or for malfeasance, misfeasance and/or nonfeasance, as well as for a variety of civil actions related to administration of personnel, purchasing contracts, tort claims, etc. Trustees must be familiar with requirements throughout the Nevada Revised Statutes. Public library boards of trustees are strongly encouraged to rely heavily on legal advice of the local District Attorney or privately hired board attorney, if the need should arise.

The Attorney General more appropriately resolves some questions. A Deputy Attorney General is assigned to advise public agencies on issues and questions related to the Nevada Open Meeting Law. Another Deputy Attorney General is assigned to the Nevada State Library and Archives to advise on matters relating to Nevada library law. This Deputy Attorney General may be approached through your District Attorney or through the State Library and Archives Administrator. It is important that your board chairperson or library director discuss potential legal issues governed by Nevada Revised Statutes with the State Library and Archives Administrator who can direct your concerns to the appropriate legal authority.

Nevada Revised Statutes on the legal authority and responsibilities of public library trustees, and related laws, cited throughout this handbook are available at Nevada public libraries and on the state government website.

Administrative Procedures Act

Nevada Revised Statutes authorize government agencies to promulgate administrative regulations for many purposes. These regulations have the force of law. NRS 33B.0607 requires each agency proposing a regulation to deposit it with the librarian in the main public library in the county so that it will be publicly accessible for review and comment. These proposed regulations, along with NRS and Nevada Administrative Code (approved regulations) are public records and subject to the copy costs required in NRS 239.052.

Public Records/Records Management

Public libraries support open government and open access to public books and records. It is important to adhere to the spirit of the law of open public access to records of the board of trustees and the library. Because Nevada has a very antiquated public records law, most disputes over access are decided by the Attorney General using a court ordered "balancing test" or in the courts themselves. An important component of public access is meeting legal requirements for length of time records are to be kept.

Records of a library that identify a user with library materials used are declared confidential by law and may be disclosed only in response to a court order. (NRS 239.013) Some computer systems are designed to destroy records that identify library materials with a user upon return of the materials to the library. Other records generated by the board and library are governed by records retention schedules developed by the Records Management section of the Nevada State Library and Archives. The local government records retention schedule found in the Nevada Administrative Code, Chapter 239, will cover most types of records. It is important to note that it is illegal to destroy records unless authorized by a records retention schedule. NRS 239.080 and NRS 239.125 prescribe the authority and method for destruction of records.

CHAPTER 4. The Library Director's Job

The director is responsible for administering all functions of the library.

Just as there is sometimes confusion about the role of the library board member, there may be confusion about the director's role on the board team. The director is first an employee of the board, but the relationship between the board and the director is not the typical employer/employee relationship. The library board members' job is to make sure the library operates well and in the best interest of those the library serves, not to demonstrate expertise in managing a library. The board must hire a qualified director, who possesses the required professional library education and experience, to manage the day-to-day operations.

Hiring a New Director

Selecting and hiring a new library director is a responsibility of the library board. Before initiating a search for a new library director, the job description needs to be reviewed to ensure that it meets current requirements, including:

- Specific duties.
- Areas of responsibility.
- Salary and fringe benefits.
- Period of probation.
- Desirable areas of expertise.
- Minimum qualifications and experience.

The salary range for the director's position (and other positions in the library) should be comparable to other city/county personnel with comparable education requirements and responsibilities.

The job description should be used to write the advertisement. The announcement should be as comprehensive as possible providing a description of the position, required education and experience, and desirable areas of expertise and work experience. Include the salary range and fringe benefits, a brief description of the library and community, where to send applications, and the application deadline. Request a resume and professional references. The job opening should be publicized to as broad an audience as possible.

Before reviewing applications, criteria should be developed and used to rank them. It is helpful if a form is developed for use in screening and comparing each applicant's qualifications to the requirements of the position. Some qualifications that could be considered in ranking applicants are:

- Education. (See Minimum Standards for Public Libraries in Nevada)
- Experience in administration of a public library, and supervisory experience.
- Ability to express clearly why the candidate would be an effective director.

References for those candidates whom the search committee is interested in interviewing should be checked. An agreed-upon list of questions should be used when calling references and responses should be recorded for use in the decision making process.

During the interview the board should pose a standard list of questions to each candidate, but don't preclude opportunities for additional questions as conversation dictates. Some areas you may wish to cover in the interview are those pertaining to management and fiscal philosophy, interlibrary cooperation, intellectual freedom and community outreach. Remember, it is illegal to ask certain questions of candidates, such as marital status, age, family plans, etc.

Evaluation of the candidates comes at the end of the interview process. The committee should discuss and rank the finalists. Some qualifications that could be considered in ranking candidates are:

- Education in library/information science.
- Philosophy of library in line with the library's mission statement.
- Ability to explain how his or her experience and talent can be used for the library.
- Attitude of service to the community.
- Successful experience with board and community leaders and supervising staff.
- Commitment to continuing education for the director, staff and trustees.

The board must decide if one or more of the candidates should be offered the job or if the search is to be reopened. The top candidate should be offered the position by telephone. If the candidate accepts the position, follow up with a letter of agreement indicating the date employment benefits, salary, fringe benefits, etc. Notify other candidates immediately after acceptance of the job offer.

The Library Directors Responsibilities

The director is charged with virtually all the day-to-day management of the library and it must be understood by both staff and board that the director is the authority in matters of routine management. Although the director is responsible for the management of the library, the board retains ultimate responsibility for everything that happens in the library. Therefore, board members should expect a continuous flow of information from the director to help them in their monitoring and evaluating roles.

As prescribed by state law (NRS 379), Nevada public library directors shall:

- Administer all functions of the library.
- Employ staff.
- Recommend policies to the trustees.
- Carry out policies established by the trustees.
- Act as department head (in city and county government).

The library director has full responsibility for the operation of the library and all that is entailed in managing a variety of complex library functions and procedures. The director is also responsible for hiring, evaluation, and discipline of library employees in accordance with county and district policies. After board members carefully hire a qualified director they delegate all management responsibility to that director. The board's job becomes one of monitoring the directors work to make sure that library plans and policies are carried out properly.

This delegating and monitoring relationship the board has with the director is very difficult to master because it is such an unusual employer/employee relationship, but a citizen board governing a qualified director is a good system. It has the best elements of both worlds - a board of trustees that represents the best interests of the community, and a qualified director who has the skills to make the library run efficiently within the parameters set by the board. The director articulates library position, within city or county governing structure, as a local government department head or as a liaison in the case of district libraries.

The director is much more than just an employee of the board. The director is a valuable resource and often the leader on many issues that come before the board. The director should sit at the board table during all board meetings and be encouraged and expected to make recommendations on all issues that come before the board and to take part in board deliberations whenever necessary to help make decisions in the best interest of the library.

There should rarely be an occasion when the board meets without the director as part of the meeting.

The director is responsible to the whole board, but not responsible to each board member individually. When delegating to the director, the board must speak with one voice. When giving direction to the director, the board must speak with one voice. When asking for accountability from the director, the board must speak with one voice.

Individual board members, including the board president, have no power to make demands of the director and should avoid trying to exercise power they don't have. The director cannot serve many masters and still manage the library effectively. This does not rule out individual board members asking the director for clarification about issues facing the board or discussing with the director concerns that individual board members may have, but it does rule out individual board members giving orders to the director.

Evaluation of the Director

The best way to evaluate and monitor the director is to have a good job description for the director and then conduct a formal annual evaluation to determine how well the director is filling the job description. Each library should have an employment handbook that covers evaluation policies as well as types of disciplinary action, dismissal and appeal procedures. Policies and procedures found in employment handbooks of city or county governments, or union contracts are also applicable to libraries.

The director's job description should be consistent with the mission, goals and objectives stated in the library's master plan. In addition to demonstrating skills and abilities in the areas of planning, decision-making and communication, the director should display knowledge of professional library practices, ethics and philosophy and of library statutes, regulations and standards. (A model job description and a comparison of the roles of library director and trustees are included in the Appendix).

Make your evaluation a positive effort to communicate effectively with the director. Look as much for what the director does well as for areas that need improvement. The annual evaluation should result in a written document, and then the cycle should start again with decisions on the basis of the evaluation for the coming years performance. Each board must work out the format and procedure for director evaluation, but it is important for everyone to understand both the criteria and process in advance.

If disciplinary action or dismissal becomes necessary, decisions must be based on a set of clearly defined, attainable job-related standards (separate from the job description) that have been acknowledged by the director at the beginning of the cycle.

Justification for dismissal should be based on job related facts (rather than personalities) and must be carefully documented. A board should not begin a dismissal process unless they understand the implications, have consulted with the appropriate local government officials, believe their position is defensible, and have obtained appropriate legal advice from an attorney.

CHAPTER 5. The Board and Policy Making

Written policies are essential for efficient library operation.

To do your board member job well, you must understand policy because that's where you'll be spending your time. You will be making policies, wrestling with policy issues, interpreting policies, monitoring policy effectiveness, enforcing policy, setting direction for the library through policies, and protecting yourself and the library through a good set of policies.

An effective set of written board policies...

- Informs every one of board intent, goals, and aspirations.
- Prevents confusion.
- Promotes consistency of board action.
- Eliminates the need for instant (crisis) policy-making.
- Reduces criticism of the board and management.
- Improves public relations.
- Clarifies board member, director and staff roles.
- Gives the director a clear direction from the board.

A board policy is a carefully designed, written general statement of direction for the library, formally adopted by a majority vote of the board at a legally constituted board meeting.

Good policy is "developed" not just written. Good policy grows out of a lengthy process of studying issues and needs, gathering facts, deliberating the issues, writing the policy and reviewing the policy annually.

Board policies are not laws...

There is little need to repeat in board policy those statutes that already have the force of state or federal law unless the board policy spells out some special manner in which the library will implement or comply with a law. For example, if state law prescribes when your fiscal year will begin, there is no need to repeat that law in a board policy.

Bylaws are a higher and more permanent set of guidelines for how the board will operate. They do not cover the broad scope of library management. (Sample Bylaws available at <http://www.managementhelp.org/boards/boards.htm> and in Appendix).

Before developing library policies and procedures all relevant laws and regulations must be reviewed to ensure that there is no conflict with local, state, or federal legislation and rules.

At a minimum every library must have current policies on personnel matters, use of facilities, and, most importantly, services -- especially in the areas of selection of materials and collection development, intellectual freedom, privacy and confidentiality of patron records, and interlibrary loan.

The list below is not intended as a comprehensive checklist of all library policies but a few examples of the types of policies that fall within various categories.

Services

- programs and services offered
- circulation/registration
- privacy/confidentiality
- patron behavior
- interlibrary loan
- intellectual freedom
- collection development
- selection of materials
- public Internet access

Community Relations

- community use of facilities
- public solicitation and advertising in the library
- news media relations
- naming of facilities

Personnel

- recruiting
- personnel records
- sexual harassment
- reduction in force
- staff development
- hiring
- part-time help
- safety/health
- salary and benefits
- paid/unpaid leave
- termination
- evaluation
- transfers
- grievances

(Personnel policies and procedures of county or city governments may also apply.)

Let's look at policy development step by step.

1. Identify the need. Unfortunately many library policies are a direct result of a problem or even a crisis rather than a result of careful planning and foresight. The best way to identify the need for particular policies is to anticipate problems and write policies before the problems occur. Although it is helpful to review other library policy manuals, each library needs to develop their own policies. Ask the NSLA Office of Library Planning and Development for help.

2. Gather the facts. Most policies will grow out of recommendations from the library director. Your director is in touch with trends, problems and issues that demand policy statements from the board. Depending on the nature of the policy, you may want to seek legal counsel.

3. Deliberate the issue. Careful deliberation of a proposed board policy should include several considerations.

4. Ask these questions.

Is the proposed policy...

- necessary?
- compatible with other policies?
- consistent with the mission statement?
- within the scope of the board authority?
- consistent with local, state and federal law?
- broad enough to cover the subject completely?
- practical?
- enforceable?
- affordable?

5. Write the policy. The actual wording of the policy is best left to the library director or a task force of board members and the director rather than the full board struggling with wording. The actual policy may come to the board and back to committee for revision several times before it is finalized. Making good policy takes time

6. Adopt the policy. Final approval of the written policy is a board responsibility.

7. Establish a schedule for policy review. Regular review of board policies can help keep policies current and at the same time keep board members current about board policies. An out of date policy can be as bad as having no policy at all.

8. Place the policies in one manual. To make board policies usable, they should be collected in one manual. The manual makes the process of learning board policy simpler for new board members and it makes application and interpretation of policies easier. A manual also makes the process of review and update of board policies much easier.

All changes in the policy manual must have board approval.

Operational Procedures and Regulations

Library procedures and regulations are not to be confused with policies. Whereas library policies address "what" the library provides, procedures and regulations provide specific details on "how" policies will be accomplished.

Using the general guidelines of board policies, the director and staff will write rules and regulations for the operation of the library. For example, your board may develop a policy that says the library will have a video collection for public lending. The director and staff will then write guidelines for purchasing materials for the collection, lending rules for the collection and various other regulations necessary to maintain and manage the collection.

The following list is an example of some operational procedures and regulations.

Board Operations

- meeting procedures
- methods of adopting policies
- committees for specified tasks
- filing ethics statements

Buildings and Grounds

- construction contracts
- maintenance requirements
- disposal of property

Business

- budgeting
- revenue collection
- setting fines and fees
- insurance
- inventories
- purchasing
- service contracts

CHAPTER 6. Library Budget and Finance

Trustees have a responsibility to safeguard public funds.

To understand the budgeting process and approve an annual budget for the library, board members must know where the money comes from and how much revenue they can expect to build into the budget each year. A good understanding of revenue sources is important as board members must encourage continued funding from those sources and find new sources when needed.

Each board member should:

- Know the library's financial base and background.
- Know the governmental unit(s) allocating the local appropriation.
- Know the grants available from the state and federal government.
- Understand the basics of legal regulations and reporting required for library funding.
- Understand the financial needs of library operation and plan for funds needed for growth and expansion.
- Investigate other possible sources of funding: a bond issue, endowments, trusts, memorials, dedicated tax revenue, foundation grants, donations, gifts, and fines.

Library trustees should not wait for a budget presentation to make a case for needed funding or to describe programs and services. This is an ongoing responsibility of all trustees.

Sources of Library Funding

Public libraries are structured in various ways in Nevada. County and city libraries are departments of county or city government and, therefore, must compete with other departments of local government, i.e. Police, Fire, etc., for funds. However, in Nevada many libraries are library districts that, as separate political entities, have separate taxing authority from that of the counties in which they are located. All districts must follow State Budget calendar and deadlines, so district library trustees must be aware of these time lines.

When library districts are formed, taxes are levied at varying rates upon all taxable property in the district to create a "library fund" and transferred to a separate account to be administered by the trustees. (NRS 379.021). Sources of state-administered funds available to local governmental entities are identified in a publication called Ad Valorem Tax Rates that is updated yearly by the Nevada Department of Taxation. Sources and distribution of state-controlled funds to libraries and other governmental entities are subject to change and it is, therefore, wise to stay abreast of the sources and comparative rates of funding. Library trustees in all types of libraries may also propose general obligation bonds that must be approved by a vote of the electorate. (NRS 379.0225)

Libraries may receive additional funds by providing services to other jurisdictions on contract. For instance, one county library contracts with two other counties for administration of library services and some public libraries contract to provide cooperative services to school districts.

Government Grants

Federal and state grant programs are an additional source of funding for local libraries. All grant programs are advertised in InfoConnection, a newsletter published by the Nevada State Library and Archives, which is mailed to all public libraries. Detailed information describing specific grant funding is sent to Nevada library directors as applications and funding become available or may be requested at any time from the Nevada State Library and Archives (NSLA) Office of Library Planning and Development.

Nevada libraries may apply to the Nevada State Library and Archives annually for funding available through the Library Services and Technology Act (LSTA). These funds are used for statewide projects and competitive local programs that support the goals, priorities and strategies of the LSTA State Plan for Nevada. Cooperative, multi-type library projects that improve public access to library and other information are given priority. Grant requests are prioritized by the State Council on Libraries and Literacy and awarded by the State Library and Archives Administrator. To qualify for funding, applicants must meet the Minimum Standards for Public Libraries in Nevada. LSTA information and application forms may be accessed directly on the NSLA website at <http://www.clan.lib.nv.us>.

Additional funding is frequently provided through the Nevada State Legislature to support statewide projects for demonstrated needs, i.e. library construction and technology for state of the art networking. There is a statutory funding formula for books, library materials, and computer databases in NRS 378.087 (1997). Library Planning and Development administer state and LSTA grants in cooperation with the State Library and Archives Administrator. Workshops and consulting are provided to assist local libraries in making application for grants.

Information concerning finances of Nevada libraries may be found in the Nevada Library Directory and Statistics, published yearly by the Nevada State Library and Archives. In addition to library listings and statistics, the directory provides contact information for officers of the State Council on Libraries and Literacy and for related boards. The directory is available online at <http://www.clan.lib.nv.us>

Statistics are gathered from local public libraries annually and compiled by the NSLA office of Library Planning and Development. The statistics serve as a basis for distribution of funding to local libraries. Nevada library statistics are also reported to the National Center for Educational Statistics. It is important for local libraries to submit statistics according to the guidelines provided to assure accuracy at local, state and national levels.

Private Grants

Private foundations, businesses and corporations may award grants to assist local libraries with programs, services or building projects. Many times the grants are from local or regional organizations or businesses that wish to give something back to their communities.

The Grant Foundation Centers at Las Vegas-Clark County Library District and at Washoe County Library have many excellent indexes and other resources containing private, as well as government grant information.

Gift Funds

A board of trustees has the authority to establish with the county or city treasurer a gift fund for the library. The fund must be separate and continuing and cannot revert to the general fund. "The money in a gift fund of a library may be used for construction of new library buildings, capital improvements to library buildings, special library services or other library purposes." (NRS 379.026)

Library Foundations

Because libraries may receive memorials and monetary gifts, and because of the need for funding outside the traditional methods, it may be a good idea for the library to consider setting up a foundation.

The library foundation functions as a separate entity and can attain 501 (c)(3) status from the Internal Revenue Service. Gifts to a foundation are tax deductible to the donor. One factor that makes a foundation extremely attractive is that many foundations will not give to tax-supported agencies, but will give to an organization that will enhance that agency's services and programs.

A source of more information is Forming and Funding Public Library Foundations. This publication is available through the Public Library Association in care of the American Library Association. A foundation may serve as a vehicle for bequests, endowments, memorials, and other forms of "planned giving." Some donors may prefer this choice.

Friends of the Library

Many libraries encourage citizens to establish Friends groups in order to raise funds for special library projects. Friends groups are excellent at attracting publicity and encouraging good public relations and good will for a library. A foundation, described above, may act as a Friends group. The American Library Association publishes Friends of the Library Sourcebook and Friends of Libraries USA (FOLUSA) National Notebook. Additional information on Friends Groups is found in Chapter 11.

Budget and Finance

In order to make good decisions, library board members need a basic understanding of library finances. The board has a clear responsibility to ensure that public funds are used in the best interest of the community and that the library has adequate financing to continue its programs and services.

The Budget Calendar

1. The budget process for the next fiscal year begins shortly after the beginning of the current fiscal year; in the course of doing the library annual report, the library director should gather information for the trustees to review in developing the budget. Some questions trustees should ask are:

- Did more people use the library this year?
- Were the prior years line item costs accurate?
- Is there a need for more programming?
- Have there been requests for new services or technology?
- Are there better ways to serve the community through the library?

2. The library director is responsible for the preparation of the budget request and the board of trustees is responsible for the final approval and adoption of the budget request before it is submitted. Items to consider when setting the budget request include.

- Reviewing the master plan for the library.
- Projecting anticipated expenditures.
- Deciding library priorities.
- Projecting anticipated revenues.

Part of the anticipated revenue includes the amount of funding the library will receive. Trustees are responsible for requesting funds for the library.

3. Budgets of county and city libraries are prepared under the same guidelines as their county and city departments, under the direction of a city or county manager. Library trustees present the budget request to the appropriate body. For county libraries, the board of county commissioners sets the final budget. For city libraries, the board of city supervisors sets the final budgets.

By contrast, in the case of library districts, the board of trustees sets the final budgets that are then submitted to the state Department of Taxation in accordance with their requirements. In the case of a consolidated district, the board of trustees submits the library budget to the board of county commissioners and the board of city supervisors for joint review and recommendation.

Revenues

If your library receives additional funding from federal, state or private grants and gifts or donations, it is important to meet the reporting and auditing requirements of funding sources. These funds may not be co-mingled in the same budget categories as general fund revenues budgeted by cities, counties and districts. As mentioned elsewhere, gift funds must be deposited in a separate fund. While some private grants may be eligible for deposit in the gift fund, many will have reporting requirements similar to those for federal and state funds.

The board of trustees must set a policy on the collecting of fines and fees. NRS 239.052 must be observed in setting fees for copying public records, including board minutes, agenda and exhibits presented at board meetings. The board should also set a fee for all other printing and copying. It is recommended that all of these policies be posted along with the notice on copying public records.

All revenues, including fines and fees, must be budgeted as part of the regular budgeting process and amended in the same way. Cash for fines and fees collected in the library must be acknowledged by receipt and deposited as often as recommended by your auditor, but not less than weekly. Fines and fees must never be deposited in the gift fund. Some cities and counties may attempt to revert fines and fees to the general fund. This can be avoided by appropriately budgeting them as revenue and expenditures. (For protection of the library staff, cash collected for fines and fees must never be treated as petty cash. If petty cash is needed, a separate fund should be established and used as necessary. Receipts must back up all withdrawals.)

Auditing

The board of trustees has the fiduciary responsibility for all funds in the public library budget! Cities and counties usually include public libraries in their annual audit. In the case of library districts, or other public libraries not covered by their local governments, the board should budget for an annual audit and review and implement all relevant recommendations annually.

Budget Management

Financial Reports

The library director should provide trustees with monthly financial reports that review:

- Current list of bills.
- Year-do-date figures.
- Total budget.
- Balance of budget.
- Explanation of major changes.

Library trustees should carefully review financial reports and be prepared to question them at board meetings, if necessary.

Budget Process

The budget process serves three basic purposes:

1. Accountability, which is related to the stewardship role of the library; the trustees have a responsibility to safeguard public funds. However, the stewardship role also includes spending the funds needed to provide library services to the community.
2. Financial information, which relates to the management role of trustees and the need for accurate, timely, and reliable information as a basis for effective decisions and library policies;
3. Information from which the public can assess the financial conditions and operations of the library.

Amending the Budget

When the library budget is adopted, it gives the library board the capability of spending all funds budgeted. If the library receives additional income from any source, it cannot be spent unless the budget is amended to include this additional income. No library can spend more than has been budgeted unless the budget is formally amended. This does not apply to library funds maintained in gift funds, by foundations or by Friends of the Library.

CHAPTER 7. Library Board Officers

Board leaders facilitate good group decisions.

Any group that expects to accomplish anything must have leaders to keep the group organized, help the group discipline itself, prod the group to move ahead, and facilitate the work of the group to make good decisions. That's the function of all board officers.

Your board may have some or all of the officers described below. Boards grow from different traditions and have different ideas about the type and number of officers they need. The job responsibilities of your board's officers may vary from those described below.

Someone has to be the board's leader and that person is the board chairperson. The job description for the chairperson is relatively simple, but the job can be complex.

First of all the board chairperson must be understood to have no power beyond that of any other board member unless the full board has granted that power to the chairperson. For example, the board may delegate specific powers to the board chairperson, such as managing board meetings, speaking to the public on behalf of the board, or signing contracts on behalf of the board.

Any powers exercised by the board chairperson must first be granted by the full board in policy, or in commonly accepted and understood practice of the board. In other words, the board president does not speak for the board unless the full board has formally or informally delegated that privilege to the chairperson.

Board Chairperson Responsibilities:

Planner--Works with the director to plan the meeting agenda and the manner in which the meeting will be conducted. The president keeps an overall view of the board year and ensures that the board is completing duties mandated by board policy or law.

Facilitator--Begins the meetings on time, directs the board through the agenda and adjourns meetings on time. Ensures that all board members have an opportunity for fair participation and that the public has an opportunity to comment so that all sides of an issue are fairly exposed, and moves the board to action on the issues.

Delegator--Appoints board members and others to committees with board consent. To do that, the president must have a clear understanding of each board member's skills, strengths and interests so that appropriate assignment can be made. Clarifies committee assignments and holds committees accountable to do the jobs assigned.

Liaison--Interprets board needs and concerns to the director, and the director's needs and concerns to the board, offers personal support and counsel to the director, and serves as a sounding board for the director.

Team builder--Promotes team concept among members. When there is danger to the team structure, the chairperson must mediate, counsel and discipline fellow board members to keep the team intact.

Vice-Chair Responsibilities:

The vice-chair of the board traditionally serves as the backup for the board chairperson. However, the vice-chair is usually assigned additional specific duties such as chairing a committee, taking charge of board development activities or preparing for special board events.

The vice-chair must work with the chair to stay current on issues and methods of board operation and be prepared to step in when the chairperson is not available. The vice-chair is often considered the logical successor to the chairperson.

Secretary Responsibilities:

The size and the complexity of the business of today's library dictate that the traditional job of the secretary of the board be significantly changed. For example, a staff member could take the minutes of the board meeting. All board members need to be able to participate in deliberations. It is difficult for the board secretary to actively participate while taking the minutes. The board secretary's job may be that of reviewing the minutes for accuracy. Clerical staff at the direction of the library director may also do correspondence on behalf of the board.

Treasurer Responsibilities:

The treasurer's job is also one of overseer. Although paid staff usually manage the finances of the library, the board treasurer is responsible to ensure that adequate financial records are kept, accurate and timely financial reports are delivered to the board and an audit of the system's finances is completed bi-annually. The treasurer may also be asked by the director to assist in preparation of the budget to be submitted to the board and to help interpret financial reports to the board.

Board officers, particularly the board chairperson, must be well respected by the rest of the board, must be willing to give the extra time necessary to carry out the extra duties of the office and must have strong leadership skills. Officers should also be board members with some experience on the board. If you are asked to be a candidate for a board office, consider carefully if you have the extra time it will take, as well as the leadership skills, to do the job well.

CHAPTER 8. Library Board Meetings

The art of compromise is the key to effective board meetings.

Regular board meetings and committee meetings are where most of the board's work is done. What you do in meetings can make the difference between an effective and an ineffective board. Poor meetings can alienate staff, damage the board team, waste your time and the time of the other board members, cause turmoil in the community and actually hamper the operation of the library.

Careful preparation is the key to meetings that produce results. Here are a few guidelines for planning and conducting an effective meeting:

- Decide what is to be accomplished.
- Define the purpose in clear terms.
- Develop a written agenda.
- Begin on time, and end on time.

You can expect the board chairperson to run the meetings and keep the board moving toward good decisions. However, it is no less each board member's responsibility to:

- Attend all meetings.
- Prepare well for meetings.
- Take part in all discussions.
- Cooperate with fellow board members to make meetings work.
- Adhere to parliamentary law and to relevant state laws.
- Learn traditional meeting practices of your board and follow them.
- Practice the art of compromise with other members of the team.
- Practice the art of listening and merging your ideas with those of the others.
- Work toward consensus on issues.
- Focus all deliberations on the best interests of library users.
- Publicly support the board decisions.

Nevada Open Meeting Law (NRS 241)

All members of the board should become familiar with the Nevada Open Meeting Law and the Nevada Open Meeting Law Manual. In order to strengthen the 1991 law, the 1997 Nevada State legislature has enacted certain amendments to NRS Chapter 241. Take special note of the amended statutes and their requirements. The complete text of the law, along with definitions and answers to common questions are essential reading for all board members.

The Open Meeting Law, requiring that all meetings be held in public, is designed to protect the public from secret dealings by public agency boards. Public notice of regular meetings must be given at least 3 working days before the meeting listing the time, place, and location, where the notice has been posted and an agenda listing specific items to be considered (NRS 241.020., 1997). The agenda must include a clear and concise statement of all topics to be discussed and must identify action items.

There have been challenges to the Open Meeting Law related to library board meetings in Nevada. A thorough knowledge of the law as it is stated in the NRS and abiding by the law should minimize such challenges.

The complete text of the law, definitions and answers to common questions are published by the Attorney General's Office in Nevada Open Meeting Law Manual, which should be available at every public library.

Parliamentary Rules:

Board meetings should be conducted according to established parliamentary rules, such as Robert's Rules of Order, or some other parliamentary procedure guide agreed on by all board members. That set of rules is intended to set a businesslike and courteous tone, allow for ample discussion of the issues, protect the right of all board members to be heard on the issues, and not allow the discussion to get out of control.

You should have a basic understanding of parliamentary rules so that you can be a part of the process of moving quickly and efficiently through a good meeting agenda. When a disagreement among board members occurs about the way to proceed, consult the parliamentary guide specified by your bylaws. As a "quick help," a one page Guide to Parliamentary Procedures has been included in the Appendix.

Caution: Parliamentary rules are not intended to impede meeting process, but simply to ensure that the rights of all board members are protected and meetings move towards action. Using parliamentary rules for the purpose of impeding the meeting process is unethical and detrimental to the team atmosphere.

Agenda:

Your board meeting should run according to an agenda prepared by the director and the board chairperson. The purpose of the agenda is to set a clear direction for the meeting. The board chairperson will ask the board to formally vote to approve the agenda plan at the beginning of the meeting. When the board approves a written meeting agenda, board members agree to discuss those issues on the approved agenda.

Even though the board chairperson and the director prepare the agenda, all board members have a right to place issues on the agenda by bringing those issues to the attention of the director or the board president. However, anything you want on the agenda must be requested well in advance of the board meeting, allowing time for a final agenda to be legally posted at least 3 working days before the meeting.

Socializing with other board members is important to building the team atmosphere, but should be done before and after the meeting, and kept to a minimum during the meeting. Extreme caution should be exercised by board members in avoiding discussion of specific library issues and matters with each other on social occasions, as this may violate the Open Meeting Law.

Minutes:

The meeting minutes, when approved by a formal vote or by consensus of the board, are the official legal records of what happened at the board meeting. The minutes are also an important communication between the board and constituents. If you are a new board member, you should examine the minutes of board meetings for at least the past year. That will give you a good perspective on the issues the board has faced and how the board handled those issues.

Any board member has a right to ask the board to correct errors in the minutes before the board accepts the minutes as a record of the previous meeting. Board members do not have a right to demand that their reasons for voting a certain way or their detailed views about an issue be recorded in the minutes. Every board member should have full opportunity to express a viewpoint prior to the vote on any issue, so there's no good reason to extend the debate into the voting process. Your "yes" or "no" vote will represent your views on the issue.

Minutes of Nevada public library board meetings are permanent records that must be available to the public within 30 days after a meeting. Board minutes must be retained by the local library for at least five years, then transferred to the State Archives. (NRS 239.080-1 25; 241.035)

Reports:

During the meeting, the board members will likely hear reports from committees, the director and staff. The reports will provide the background and information the board needs to deal with the issues on the agenda for the rest of the meeting.

Often, the reports will conclude with a recommendation for board action. If those reports were in written form and sent to the board members prior to the meeting, you should be well prepared to take action on those reports without having them read to you during the meeting. Those presenting reports during the meeting will simply highlight information, clarify items, and answer questions.

Motions:

A motion is a formal request or proposal for the board to take action. Motions usually come from two major sources, committee reports and director recommendations, but board members may make motions at any time in accordance with the parliamentary guide.

To make a motion, you simply address the chairperson and say, "I move that..." and state the action you wish the board to take. Most motions require that another board member support the request for action by seconding the motion.

Once the motion is seconded, the chairperson restates it. The board then begins discussion of the motion. Some motions, such as the motion to adjourn, do not require discussion. By requiring a motion on an issue prior to discussion, the board focuses discussion on agenda items only and stays on track.

After a motion is made and seconded, there should be plenty of time to discuss freely all the pros and cons of any issue. At the same time, the chairperson and all board members must work to keep the discussion moving towards a decision - that's the reason the issue is on the agenda.

Once the motion has been discussed thoroughly, the chairperson will call for board members to vote on the motion. You may be asked to vote by saying "aye" (yes) or "nay" (no) in a voice vote, by a show of hands or in a roll-call vote. Your vote will be recorded in the minutes.

Abstaining rather than voting "yes" or "no" on a motion before the board should be very rare and is usually appropriate only when you have a conflict of interests in the issue before the board. You are appointed to express an opinion on the issues, and abstaining expresses no opinion.

Once the vote is taken, the chairperson will declare that the motion passes or fails. Upon completion of an item on the agenda, the chairperson moves on to the next agenda item.

Committees:

The many and complex issues with which your board works cannot always be handled efficiently by the full board. Many issues may be delegated to board committees for study with the understanding the committees will make recommendations to the full board.

At some time in your service on the library board you will be asked to serve on at least one committee and you need to understand the nature and purpose of committees. Committee work is a good place for board members to offer any special expertise they may have, but service on committees is not limited to experts on the committee subject. Committee service is a good way to learn more about the library.

Often committee members are selected from people outside the board so that additional expertise can be utilized by the board through the committee. Involving non-board members also builds ownership among other members of the public and opens a new avenue of communication between library and community.

Committees expand the capabilities and act as an extension of the board. Committees are always responsible to the full board and have no power or authority beyond what is granted to them by the full board. The only actions committees can traditionally take is to study an issue assigned by the full board and make recommendations to the full board about the assigned issues. Board members not on the committee should feel free to ask questions and get clarification from committee members, but avoid repeating work the committee has done. Meetings of the full board should not be used as a time to conduct committee meetings. The purpose of the committee is to save time for the board. If the full board repeats the committee discussions after the committee reports to the board, the board has not saved time but rather doubled the time spent on the issue.

Your board may already have standing or permanent committees that are described in the bylaws of the library and function year round. As certain important issues arise, the board may also appoint temporary or "ad hoc" committees to study those issues for the board.

At certain times, the board may meet as a committee of the whole. This is done to allow time for in-depth discussion of one subject. The issue is then presented as a committee report at the regular board meeting where formal action is taken.

Your board may also have an executive committee. This committee is usually composed of the board officers and the director. It often has limited powers to act for the board in emergencies, but must have all actions ratified by the board at the next regular meeting.

When you are appointed to a committee, it is your responsibility to learn the mission of the committee, when and where the committee meets, and the names of other members. You should also examine the history of the committee and the minutes of their meetings for at least the past year.

Help your committee stay focused on its responsibility and accountability to the full board. Although committee meetings are usually not as formal as a full board meeting, they should have a chairperson, a distinct structure, agenda and goals. When the committee completes its meeting, there should be a clear result of the meeting that can be reported to the full board.

Committees are given the charge to study and recommend, not making the board decision. Committees are a valuable extension of the board, but only if they work in an orderly and accountable fashion. Committees, as described in this chapter, are subject to the Open Meeting Law.

CHAPTER 9. The Decision Making Process

Good decisions aren't made "by the seat of your pants."

Your board team will have to make dozens of decisions all the way from deciding meeting times to deciding to build a new building.

Good decisions are made through a logical, common sense process that includes plenty of pertinent information, expert advice, experience, vision and exchange of ideas among members of the board team.

Politics, special interests and personal bias are realities that always come into play when a board attempts to make a team decision, but with a well-understood and followed decision-making process, those elements can be controlled and the board team can make good decisions.

The following steps will lead to effective board decisions:

Define the issue clearly. First make sure that all members of the board team are on the same channel. You could deliberate for hours on an issue that deserves only a few minutes if all board members aren't clear about what the issue really is. The best way to avoid that is to get a motion on the table right away so everyone can focus on that specific motion. The chairperson should make it clear to all what a positive or a negative vote means. If you are not clear about the intent or meaning of the motion, ask the maker of the motion to clarify.

Look at the information. Good information is the only way a board team can understand enough about the issues to make good decisions. Your experience is a prime source of valuable information. Other board members will have valuable information and insights.

Board members are not on the front line with the daily business of the library and probably have limited expertise in library management. That means you have to rely on information from a variety of other people. The director and committee reports are standard sources for information about the issues that come before the board. Call on outside experts when necessary.

Board members aren't appointed for their expertise and experience in running a library, but rather their ability to ask the right questions, draw upon their experience and leadership skills and make good, informed decisions for the benefit of the library and community.

Consider the alternatives. Approach every issue with an open mind, believing that there is more than one side to every issue. What seems obvious at first glance may prove to have serious consequences down the road. Play the "devil's advocate," ask tough questions and encourage other members of the team to voice opinions even though they may not agree with the majority.

Even a strong recommendation from the director or a board committee should not be accepted without a hard look at the possible alternatives. The director and committees should be expected to deliver a list of alternatives they have considered in arriving at their final recommendation.

Seek assistance. You should expect a recommendation from your director on all issues before the board. Never be afraid to seek help from outside the board from attorneys and other specialists who can help you make the decision. Just remember that no matter who recommends what or who advises you how to vote, the board has the ultimate responsibility and liability for the decisions they make. You can't blame others for your poor decisions.

Keep in mind your mission and goals. All that you do should be in line with the mission of the library. Every decision the board makes should be in line with the five year masterplan of the library and somehow advance the mission. You should also be able to say that every decision is for the greatest good of those who use the library.

Project the consequences. This is where the board members vision comes in. A board decision cannot be made in isolation from all other things going on in the library. You must consider how this decision will affect people, programs and plans. How will the community be affected by your decision? Are there possible legal problems with this decision? Will a decision to spend money in one area mean that less money will be available for other areas?

A decision today could well have consequences for years to come. For example, a decision to build a new building would be very shortsighted if it did not take into consideration the cost of upkeep and maintenance for the life of the building.

Vote. This is where you put it all together and voice your own individual decision on the issue. Set aside personal bias and emotions and cast the vote for what you think is the best decision for the library.

Some Roadblocks to Good Decision Making

You and your board will not always make the best decisions because there are sometimes roadblocks waiting for you. Understanding the roadblocks will help you make more good decisions than bad ones.

Poor information is a major cause of poor board decisions. Not asking the right questions, listening to the wrong people or simply letting your ego lead you to believe you know all you need to know about the issue, can lead quickly to a poor decision. Plenty of good information is your first line of defense against poor decisions.

Not allowing time for good deliberation of an issue will result in a poor decision. Cutting off debate before all board members have a good opportunity to discuss the issue may deprive the board of insights needed for a good decision.

Pressure from individuals or special interest groups often results in poor decisions from board members who simply want to get out from under the pressure-no matter the cost. The key to removing this roadblock is a policy that says we listen to all segments and then make all decisions based on what's best for all who use the library.

Emotions often trip up trustees and lead to poor decisions. At some time most boards will have heated debate over an issue. But board members must recognize when debate has gone beyond spirited discussion and fallen into a personal attack, anger and argument. When that happens, it's time to break or table the issue until all cool down. Voting on an issue when board members have forgotten the facts and are operating on emotions will result in a poor decision.

Many of the decisions your board team makes will be done by consensus. Consensus simply means that all board members accept a decision on an issue even though each board member may not completely agree with the decision. Compromise is at the head of arriving at consensus on any issue.

CHAPTER 10. Planning for the Library's Future

Failing to plan is planning to fail.

The purpose of planning for the library's future is to anticipate both opportunities and problems. Planning involves the following basic questions:

- What is our purpose?
- Where are we now?
- Where do we want to go?
- How will we get there?
- What is the optimum time frame for achievement?
- How will we know what we accomplished?

What is our purpose?

The library mission should be expressed in a brief statement of the library's purpose that sets the focus for planning. It is based on, but not limited to, a vision of the library's roles in the community. While somewhat general, the statement should summarize the library's major areas of emphasis.

Where are we now?

Before you can plan for the future, you must know where you are now. The background, history and trends of the library system must be explored before effective goals and objectives can be developed.

Facts and figures about the library system service and operation, service area population, and library trends are important. Input from the library director, staff, friends of the library, and the general public is essential. To successfully plan for the future, trustees must have the benefit of hard facts, professional insight, and public interest.

Every library board has a fundamental duty to develop an effective library plan. A good plan becomes a road map for the library. It assists the board and the director in making reasoned decisions that are the best ones for the community being served. It also publicizes the library's priorities and its vision of the future.

The plan should reflect intense examination of the following questions:

- How is the library meeting the identified needs of the community?
- What are the economic, political, and cultural factors that impact library services?
- What trends can be identified as being significant to the library?
- What roles should the library play in the community?
- Where should the library be in the future?
- What is the mission of the library? What are the goals?
- What steps should be taken? Who has responsibility for each step?
- How will the board determine when the plan has succeeded?
- What measurements will be used?

Planning involves looking at what is possible and considering a wide range of alternatives. Open-mindedness and creativity are paramount in developing a plan which will direct the most effective use of library resources. Board members must keep in mind the present and future needs and the values of the entire community served by the library. Planning is a board/director partnership. Obtaining input from the members of the public, as well as from staff, is critical. The director and staff must have strong involvement in the formulation of the plan.

Where do we want to go?

The library's mission should reflect identified needs of the people in the community. Goals and objectives describe the conditions that must be achieved in order to support the library's mission. Both goals and objectives describe what the library should accomplish, not how it will accomplish those results.

Goals are general, non-measurable descriptions of conditions or accomplishments that will support the library mission. Goals are generally not time limited and often are not expected to be fully accomplished.

Objectives are specific, measurable, time-limited descriptions of desired results. Achievement of objectives will be the basis for assessment of success in meeting library goals.

How will we get there?

Activities are specific steps that will be taken in order to meet stated objectives. The activities will state how each objective can be met. For every objective, a number of possible activities should be identified and analyzed. The analysis should include the potential impact of each activity on the objective, the likelihood of success, and the cost and impact on other library activities. One or more activities should be selected for each objective.

What is the optimum time frame for achievement?

Strategies must be carefully developed for carrying the overall plan into effect. Divide the selected approach into steps and map out the time frame for accomplishment. Assign priorities for essential steps and desirable steps, keeping in mind which activities must be completed first to form a foundation for others. Another important consideration in strategic planning is timing relative to other community priorities, trends and programs. This ranking will dictate allocation of time, effort and funding.

How do we know what we accomplished?

After the plan has been finalized and implemented, the planning process shifts to review and evaluation. The board will monitor the plan's progress. Have any goals been accomplished? Are parts of the plan out of date and in need of amendment? Are there new elements that need to be added to the plan? What is the impact on community and individual needs? Your plan should include performance indicators and output measures by which success may be gauged in terms of meeting specified needs. Plans are not set in stone. They are dynamic documents and at times it is necessary to change them in relation to changing needs. While mission statements are not apt to be changed for a long time, goals, objectives and action statements are likely to be altered in the review process.

Nevada Public Library Boards of Trustees not only should be planning for the future, but also are required to plan by state law. Nevada Revised Statute 379.003 states that "The governing body of every public library in this state shall develop, through a continuing process of planning, a master plan for the library or libraries for which it is responsible, including plans for levels of library services and resources, and shall submit the plan to the State Council on Libraries and Literacy. The master plan must be designed to extend 5 years into the future and must be made current at least every 2 years. (Added to NRS, 1981, A 1993)

This statute is echoed in the MINIMUM PUBLIC LIBRARY STANDARDS FOR NEVADA that state that "The Library Board of Trustees shall have a written master plan of service covering five years and update it every two years."

The NSLA office of Library Planning and Development provides consulting services for planning upon request from Nevada public libraries. A comprehensive guidebook and a 328-page manual on Planning for Results have been developed under the auspices of the Public Library Association. These resources may be ordered from the American Library Association (1-800-545-2433; press 7).

Planning Library Facilities

The construction or renovation of a library building is one of the most exciting and ambitious projects that a Board of Trustees undertakes. Careful planning is essential to a successful building program.

The initial step is the formation of a building committee composed of individuals whose expertise is needed. The basic building team usually consists of the library director, selected staff and board members, appropriate government officials, library users (and later) an architect and building contractor.

The Building Committee prepares a "Building Program" which is a narrative describing a collective vision of the type of facility needed, based on a detailed summary of community demographics in the library's service area, statistics on current services, and specifics on the roles and functions the library serves. It will also include projected needs for space and furnishings and diagrams of departmental interaction. The Building Program is a major tool that creates a "word picture" to be used by the architect in drafting a design that will meet community needs.

Hiring the right architect is the most critical step in a successful building project. An architect with experience in library design who can communicate effectively with the Library Building Committee is highly desirable. The architect needs a great deal of input from the team before beginning to draft plans to meet specified needs.

It is not possible to over-prepare for a building project. The Building Committee should be functioning many months in advance of selecting an architect. In the long run, clarity in describing what is needed can save time, energy and money. Although building projects can be time-consuming and frustrating, they allow the library board and staff to take on the exciting challenge of planning for the community's future library services.

Because a library board and staff will not have the necessary expertise to deal with all aspects of a library-building project, outside consultants may be used to provide specialized guidance. Consultants can suggest procedures, prevent mistakes, introduce new ideas, and sometimes defuse controversy. Some types of consultants whose services may be needed are:

Library Building Consultant
Library Services Consultant
Automation Consultant

Attorney
Architect
Certified Public Accountant

The Library Board should draft a "Request for Proposal" (RFP) for potential consultants to review needed services. After a bid is selected, a contract should be entered by the Board and the consultant before any work begins.

CHAPTER 11. Library Advocacy and Public Relations

An effective trustee promotes the interest of the library at all times.

As a trustee, you must have a deep personal commitment to your library and the services it provides. You must have a sense of what you want your library to be in the future, not just what it is today, and you must be willing to work to help move forward to that point. The trustee who has the deep personal commitment to the library is well on the way toward being a good advocate.

As a trustee, you will come to appreciate the concept of libraries as an integral part of our society. Our entire educational process depends, to a great extent, on the quality of information services. Libraries are not only part of our present society; they are a part of our history that has helped move society forward. They are the hope for an informed future. They serve the societal good. When you advocate better public library services, you advocate better quality of life for American citizens today and in the future.

As an advocate for libraries, you must be willing to go out into your community on behalf of the library. All communities served by public libraries consist not only of library users to whom the trustee must respond, but also of citizens who pay taxes to support the library but do not use it. You must recognize the entire community and be prepared to work with groups as well as individuals. This means not just waiting for an invitation, but aggressively pursuing opportunities to speak before various community groups.

You are expected to know enough about your library to be able to respond to queries and to articulate just what the library has to offer. You must have a clear idea of how your library fulfills community expectations and values and be able to "tell the library story" to illustrate this in a meaningful way.

To be an effective advocate you must understand the different roles and responsibilities of librarians and trustees and do everything possible to work together meaningfully to develop and promote a comprehensive library program. For example, at a county commission or city supervisors meeting it is appropriate for you as a trustee to present and support the library's programs and budget, and for the librarian to be there to answer technical questions regarding services. The more you understand your library's roles the better advocate you will be.

A successful advocate can bring new users into the library, bring new revenues into the library, and increase awareness of library services. Legislators have been known to see the public library from a new perspective after speaking to an effective trustee advocate. Remember, the reason you were appointed to the library board is because you have the ability to help improve the library's services. The people to whom you speak may be motivated to write a bequest to the library in a will, ask a corporate officer to consider a donation to the library, or speak to state or federal legislators on behalf of the library.

Your advocacy for the library will take different forms, including establishing a relationship with the mayor, city manager and supervisors and/or the county manager and county commissioners, and state legislators. You will also be expected to communicate the value of library services to the taxpayer. Your advocacy efforts will generally be part of a planned board effort. The board must speak with one voice. You, as an individual board member, can speak about the board's official position on library-related issues. An effective trustee promotes the interest of the library at all times.

Finally, as a trustee advocate, you will be a defender of intellectual freedom, and of an individual's right to information. That includes, but is not limited to, firm support of the American Library Association's Freedom to Read Statement and Library Bill of Rights. (Both documents are included in the Appendix.) One of the questions frequently asked of library trustees (usually in open forum) is whether a particular book or other item should be in the library's collection. The response must be unequivocal in defense of intellectual freedom. You must explain that the role of the library is to provide materials in response to the needs of all segments of the community and (when available) to provide information on all sides of a given issue.

Communicating to the community about library services and programs is of great importance. The library system was established to serve the community, but if citizens are not aware of this resource, then the services remain unused.

Public relations is more than sending press releases announcing board meetings or operation hours. Public relations involves educating and informing distinct groups in the population about the programs, services, needs and opportunities offered by public libraries.

Increasing library visibility and, therefore library usage, is an important function in which the library director and trustees must work together. Trustees enjoy unique opportunities to serve as liaisons between the public and their library, translating community needs into improved policies and programs and keeping in mind their role as a good will ambassador building awareness and support wherever possible.

The various responsibilities can be placed in two categories:

Board responsibility is to:

- Establish a public relations policy.
- Make sure there is a public relations plan and a budget for public relations activities.
- Participate in public relations events and evaluate your library's P.R. activities.
- Encourage staff involvement in public relations.

Individual trustee responsibility is to:

- Be vocal, visible and well informed -- use your library and spread the word about its services and successes.
- Look for opportunities to build a positive image for the library.
- Tell people about the library's programs, progress and plans.

Library board trustees, both individually and collectively, can improve the public's knowledge and awareness about the library program by:

- Speaking to various groups, individuals, and organizations, (civic, business, professional, and social) about library programs, services, and facilities.
- Finding out the community's reaction to the library and its services, including program suggestions and other improvements, and relaying these ideas back to the director.
- Standing up for the library's needs when funding is discussed and as communities plan for public services.
- Writing or calling your local, state or national public officials.
- Bringing newer members onto the board and assuring broad community representation on the board.
- Encouraging the development of Friends of the Library and volunteer programs where suitable, and stimulating programs and services involving a variety of groups in the community.

A strong library system is an important part of the infrastructure of any community. A proactive communications plan helps business leaders, economic developers, public officials, and the general public remain aware of library services and resources. Public and community relations can become the means by which a trustee's community knows, appreciates, and uses the public library to the fullest extent. More can be found on Library Advocacy in Chapter 2.

Friends of the Library are volunteer organizations formed with the agreement of the Library Director and Board of Trustees. Friends' groups expand the circle of contacts in the community begun by trustee board members. Often, it is from these loyal supporters of libraries that trustees are chosen. Friends extend great enthusiasm, eagerness and assistance in a variety of ways.

Typical functions of Friends of the Library groups include:

- Economic aid to the library—fund-raising or purchase of materials for the library.
- Volunteers to assist library staff.
- Grass root support of political action in support of the library.

Friends groups differ from library to library. In every case the Friends organization and library organization are essentially different and distinct and thus their roles are also distinctly different. They exist to promote the library. However, all involved must understand that Friends do not make policy.

Trustees should assist Friends groups and support activities by providing leadership to:

- Develop policies on Friends and volunteers.
- Work with the library director to draft procedures and regulations.
- Meet semi-annually with Friends board to plan and define goals for the group.
- Invite and welcome Friends to trustee board meetings.
- Attend Friends' board meetings and special events.
- Appoint a special trustee representative as a liaison to the Friends group.
- Provide information and ask for input.

Friends of Libraries USA (FOLUSA)

FOLUSA provides help to motivate and strengthen local libraries by:

- Assisting in developing Library Friends groups.
- Providing guidance, education and counsel.
- Serving as a clearinghouse for information.

You may contact FOLUSA by calling 1-800-9FOLUSA.

Volunteers from Friends Groups or other sources may be extraordinarily useful in libraries. Successful volunteer programs are most productive when they are:

- Planned and approved by the staff and board of trustees.
- Clear about work descriptions, the status of the volunteers and the expectations, including regular hours and consistent service and supervision.
- Mindful of need for recognition and appreciation of volunteer work.
- Realistic expectations of hours, types of work to be done and training required.
- Open to the community, but on the basis of specific job descriptions and capacities of volunteers to fill the jobs.
- Structured to provide recognition and appreciation of volunteers.
- Regularly evaluated.

Cooperation and support by the library trustees is vital to a sound volunteer program. Trustees should show appreciation for good volunteer assistance.

Lobbying is the public relations term describing activities related to presenting information to governmental authorities or entities. It is essential for board members to know the political process and to learn ways to affect decision-making. The public library is irrevocably involved with the governmental authorities of the community. The Nevada Revised Statutes allows libraries to be created in several ways and the powers and responsibilities of the library board are specifically outlined for each. Even though the board has governance obligations, the public library will still be dependent on the local legislative body, and occasionally the state legislature, for funding. Board members can be the most effective lobbyists for the library at all levels-- local, state and federal.

Contact must be continuous with the local authorities, both on an informal basis and with formal written reports and oral presentations at meetings. Board members should communicate in a consistent and timely manner by:

- Getting to know the local authorities and telling them what libraries do for constituents.
- Preparing facts and statistics and translating them into visible action.
- Preparing evidence of the need for legislation or funding.

Many boards invite representatives of the local government to a special meeting either annually or biennially. The local library is introduced as it currently operates and its policies and long-range plan are discussed.

Board members should involve the community -- Friends' group, library users, civic groups and business contacts -- to help put library issues before the voters and governing officials in an effort to gain favorable public sentiment.

In lobbying for state and federal action, the board should work closely with other trustee boards and Friends of the Library groups and with the Nevada Library Association and the American Library Association. Both associations have established legislative networks to notify interested parties of pending legislation and the need for immediate contact with legislators or other authorities. Many boards select one of their members to act as the local liaison to the networks to eliminate confusion when the state or national coordinator calls for immediate action.

Lobbying on library issues is putting your role as library advocate in the forefront.

CHAPTER 12. Nevada Library Agencies and Associations

Nevada State Library and Archives

Mission Statement

The Nevada State Library and Archives serves government, business, libraries and citizens by providing a full range of information services, including reference and research; archival and records management; library planning and development; blind and physically handicapped programs; literacy programs; and development for state information policy to ensure public access to government information in all formats.

Agency Background

On November 29, 1861, the First Territorial Legislature created the function of the library. On February 14, 1865, the First State Legislature created the Nevada State Library. The archival role was officially identified in 1965 by the legislature and with public records these functions were administratively combined with the State Library by legislative action: Archives in 1979 and Records Management in 1983. In 1985, the agency's name was formally changed by the legislature to The Nevada State Library and Archives (NSLA) to reflect the expanded duties and responsibilities. (Nevada Revised Statutes Chapter 378, 379, 380A and 239). In October 1993, the agency became a division of the Department of Museums, Library and Arts. The purpose of the agency is to provide reference, research, archival and records management services to public officers and their staffs. This function is extended to state and local government agencies, other libraries and researchers. The NSLA also coordinates the development of statewide plans and activities to enhance access to all types of information. The State Library and Archives Administrator is responsible for directing all functions of the agency, its services and operations.

Agency Overview

Library Planning & Development (LPD) coordinates statewide development of library services. LPD administers federal, state and private grant operations, provides public library consulting services, collects public library statistics and publishes the Nevada Library Directory and Statistics. The Regional Library for the Blind and Physically Handicapped in Carson City and Las Vegas are also part of Library Planning & Development.

Public & Technical Services (PTS) provides for the informational research needs of government agencies, libraries and researchers. This includes developing, maintaining and facilitating access to state and federal government documents collections, census data, Nevada and Reference collections. PTS also manages a legislative telephone hotline throughout each legislative session.

Archives and Records Management (ARM) acquires, preserves, organizes, maintains, and makes government records available for use at state and local levels. This includes the development of appropriate policies and procedures, proposed legislation and public outreach. Micrographics is also a function of ARM.

The Nevada Literacy Coalition (NLC) coordinates statewide literacy efforts and provides training, consultation and public outreach. A State Literacy Resource Collection is available to literacy program managers, tutors and students.

The Cooperative Libraries Automated Network (CLAN) is a growing consortium of library systems operating under a cooperative inter-local agreement that is administered by the Nevada State Library and Archives. Network members share a central computer system that supports library management functions, including circulation, inventory control, bibliographic and online catalog services.

Nevada State Library and Archives publishes a newsletter twice yearly, InfoConnection, which provides information about the Nevada State Library and Archives, including administration of LSTA funds. ML&A, Department of Museums, Library & Arts quarterly newsletter also features articles of interest to librarians, trustees, and library constituents.

State Council on Libraries and Literacy (SCLL)

SCLL members are appointed by the Governor in accordance with the Nevada Revised Statutes (Chapter 380A). The membership consists of eleven members who represent public, school, academic and special or institutional libraries; persons with disabilities; state labor organizations; private sector employers; library users; volunteer, private or community based literacy organizations; and a classroom teacher who has demonstrated outstanding results in teaching children or adults to read. The directors of the following state agencies (or their designees) serve as ex officio members of the council: Department of Museums, Library and Arts; Department of Education; State Job Training Office; Department of Human Resources; Commission on Economic Development; and Department of Prisons. Officers of state government whose agencies provide funding for literacy services may be designated by the governor or the chairman of the council to serve whenever matters within the jurisdiction of the agency are considered by the council. The governor shall ensure that there is appropriate representation on the advisory council of urban and rural areas of the state, women, persons with disabilities and racial and ethnic minorities.

The Council advises the State Library and Archives Administrator on matters concerning the development of libraries and literacy programs in Nevada. One of its primary tasks is to review grant applications from public and other libraries seeking financial support from federal and state sources of funds and to advise on priorities for funding. To accomplish this, Council Members consider the status of Nevada's library development, trends of growth, adherence of local libraries to minimum standards, certification of librarians, services to special populations and other elements of library and literacy services. In addition to the federal Library Services and Technology (LSTA) funds, the State Legislature provides formula funding for collection development in public libraries and periodically appropriates additional state funds for Nevada libraries. The State Library and Archives Administrator coordinates closely with all state agencies with programs related to libraries and literacy to optimize services to all Nevadans.

Nevada Library Association

Beginnings and Purpose

The Nevada Library Association (NLA) had its beginnings with a small group of librarians meeting in Reno in 1946 to discuss the possibility of forming a state library association. A letter was drafted and sent to other librarians in the state. Interest grew and the first association Constitution was adopted June 4, 1946, stating that the object of the association "shall be to promote library service and librarianship." Changes to the Bylaws in 1977 expanded the purpose of NLA:

Article II. Purpose: The purpose of NLA shall be to promote library service of the highest quality for all present and potential users of libraries in Nevada. NLA is organized and operated for educational and library purposes, no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private individual or member.

Structure of the Nevada Library Association

The Nevada Library Association has an elected president and a board of trustees. The board of trustees consists of the president, the president elect who serves as vice president, the executive secretary, the treasurer, the immediate past president, and one representative from each of the three districts and each of the three sections of the association. Advisory, nonvoting members are the State Library and Archives Administrator, the library representative of the Nevada State Department of Education, and NLA delegates, if any, to national and regional organizations.

There are three districts, organized geographically within the state: the Southern District, the Northwest District and the Northeast District. Each district reflects the interests of all groups within the boundaries of the district and each is governed by its own rules of procedure, in accordance with the Bylaws of the association..

There are also three sections within the Nevada Library Association, each section reflecting specific types of library services within the state:

1. The Nevada School and Children's Library Section (NSCLS) has been influential in changing legislation relating to school libraries and adding to the curriculum for school librarianship within Nevada's university system.
2. The charge of the Public Library and Trustees Organization (PLATO) is to promote and foster the development of public library services in Nevada by providing training events for public library personnel and trustees.
3. The stated purpose of the Nevada College and Research Libraries (NCRL) is to promote library service of the highest quality for all present and potential users of academic and special libraries in Nevada.

Various interest groups have served at different times and stages in Nevada's library history. Current NLA interest groups include: All Classifications Teamed in One Network (ACTION), Collections, Automation, Preservation, Technical Services & Acquisitions in Nevada (CAPTAIN), Government Documents Interest Group (GODIG), Nevada Networking/Automation Group (NNAG), Nevada Young Readers' Award (NYRA) and Reference and Information Searchers of Nevada (RAISON).

Much of the work of the NLA is carried on through a variety of committees, including a Government Relations Committee that works with the State Library and Archives Administrator to develop, support and monitor library-related legislation. During biennial Legislative sessions the NLA sometimes supports the partial time of a Lobbyist to monitor library legislation and represent Nevada library interests at committee meetings and hearings.

Nevada Library Association Annual Meeting

Each year NLA sponsors an annual meeting, usually three or four days in the fall, providing a variety of educational opportunities for a nominal registration fee. Each section and interest group sponsors at least one program or workshop, resulting in a wide variety of topics from which attendees may choose. The overall event also provides opportunities for library staff, trustees, and others to learn about new developments in the field of library and information science, and to network and gain ideas and motivation for improving library services. Some local libraries support trustee membership, along with registration and travel expenses for participation in the annual statewide meeting. As a Nevada library trustee, you are encouraged to become an active member of the Nevada Library Association.

The American Library Association affirms that all libraries are forums for information and ideas, and that the following basic policies should guide their services.

- I. Books and other library resources should be provided for the interest, information, and enlightenment of all people of the community the library serves. Materials should not be excluded because of the origin, background, or views of those contributing to their creation.
- II. Libraries should provide materials and information presenting all points of view on current and historical issues. Materials should not be proscribed or removed because of partisan or doctrinal disapproval.
- III. Libraries should challenge censorship in the fulfillment of their responsibility to provide information and enlightenment.
- IV. Libraries should cooperate with all persons and groups concerned with resisting abridgment of free expression and free access to ideas.
- V. A person's right to use a library should not be denied or abridged because of origin, age, background, or views.
- VI. Libraries which make exhibit spaces and meeting rooms available to the public they serve should make such facilities available on an equitable basis, regardless of the beliefs or affiliations of individuals or groups requesting their use.

The Freedom to Read Statement

The freedom to read is essential to our democracy. It is continuously under attack. Private groups and public authorities in various parts of the country are working to remove or limit access to reading materials, to censor content in schools, to label “controversial” views, to distribute lists of “objectionable” books or authors, and to purge libraries. These actions apparently rise from a view that our national tradition of free expression is no longer valid; that censorship and suppression are needed to avoid the subversion of politics and the corruption of morals. We, as citizens devoted to reading and as librarians and publishers responsible for disseminating ideas, wish to assert the public interest in the preservation of the freedom to read.

Most attempts at suppression rest on a denial of the fundamental premise of democracy: that the ordinary citizen, by exercising critical judgment, will accept the good and reject the bad. The censors, public and private, assume that they should determine what is good and what is bad for their fellow citizens.

We trust Americans to recognize propaganda and misinformation, and to make their own decisions about what they read and believe. We do not believe they need the help of censors to assist them in this task. We do not believe they are prepared to sacrifice their heritage of a free press in order to be “protected” against what others think may be bad for them. We believe they still favor free enterprise in ideas and expression.

These efforts at suppression are related to a larger pattern of pressures being brought against education, the press, art and images, films, broadcast media, and the Internet. The problem is not only one of actual censorship. The shadow of fear cast by these pressures leads, we suspect, to an even larger voluntary curtailment of expression by those who seek to avoid controversy.

Such pressure toward conformity is perhaps natural to a time of accelerated change. And yet suppression is never more dangerous than in such a time of social tension. Freedom has given the United States the elasticity to endure strain. Freedom keeps open the path of novel and creative solutions, and enables change to come by choice. Every silencing of a heresy, every enforcement of an orthodoxy, diminishes the toughness and resilience of our society and leaves it the less able to deal with controversy and difference.

Now as always in our history, reading is among our greatest freedoms. The freedom to read and write is almost the only means for making generally available ideas or manners of expression that can initially command only a small audience. The written word is the natural medium for the new idea and the untried voice from which come the original contributions to social growth. It is essential to the extended discussion that serious thought requires, and to the accumulation of knowledge and ideas into organized collections.

We believe that free communication is essential to the preservation of a free society and a creative culture. We believe that these pressures toward conformity present the danger of limiting the range and variety of inquiry and expression on which our democracy and our culture depend. We believe that every American community must jealously guard the freedom to publish and to circulate, in order to preserve its own freedom to read. We believe that publishers and librarians have a profound responsibility to give validity to that freedom to read by making it possible for the readers to choose freely from a variety of offerings. The freedom to read is guaranteed by the Constitution. Those with faith in free people will stand firm on these constitutional guarantees of essential rights and will exercise the responsibilities that accompany these rights.

We therefore affirm these propositions:

1. It is in the public interest for publishers and librarians to make available the widest diversity of views and expressions, including those that are unorthodox or unpopular with the majority.

Creative thought is by definition new, and what is new is different. The bearer of every new thought is a rebel until that idea is refined and tested. Totalitarian systems attempt to maintain themselves in power by the ruthless suppression of any concept that challenges the established orthodoxy. The power of a democratic system to adapt to change is vastly strengthened by the freedom of its citizens to choose widely from among conflicting opinions offered freely to them. To stifle every nonconformist idea at birth would mark the end of the democratic process. Furthermore, only through the constant activity of weighing and selecting can the democratic mind attain the strength demanded by times like these. We need to know not only what we believe but why we believe it.

2. Publishers, librarians, and booksellers do not need to endorse every idea or presentation they make available. It would conflict with the public interest for them to establish their own political, moral, or aesthetic views as a standard for determining what should be published or circulated.

Publishers and librarians serve the educational process by helping to make available knowledge and ideas required for the growth of the mind and the increase of learning. They do not foster education by imposing as mentors the patterns of their own thought. The people should have the freedom to read and consider a broader range of ideas than those that may be held by any single librarian or publisher or government or church. It is wrong that what one can read should be confined to what another thinks proper.

3. It is contrary to the public interest for publishers or librarians to bar access to writings on the basis of the personal history or political affiliations of the author.

No art or literature can flourish if it is to be measured by the political views or private lives of its creators. No society of free people can flourish that draws up lists of writers to whom it will not listen, whatever they may have to say.

4. There is no place in our society for efforts to coerce the taste of others, to confine adults to the reading matter deemed suitable for adolescents, or to inhibit the efforts of writers to achieve artistic expression.

To some, much of modern expression is shocking. But is not much of life itself shocking? We cut off literature at the source if we prevent writers from dealing with the stuff of life. Parents and teachers have a responsibility to prepare the young to meet the diversity of experiences in life to which they will be exposed, as they have a responsibility to help them learn to think critically for themselves. These are affirmative responsibilities, not to be discharged simply by preventing them from reading works for which they are not yet prepared. In these matters values differ, and values cannot be legislated; nor can machinery be devised that will suit the demands of one group without limiting the freedom of others.

5. It is not in the public interest to force a reader to accept with any expression the prejudgment of a label characterizing it or its author as subversive or dangerous.

The ideal of labeling presupposes the existence of individuals or groups with wisdom to determine by authority what is good or bad for the citizen. It presupposes that individuals must be directed in making up their minds about the ideas they examine. But Americans do not need others to do their thinking for them.

6. It is the responsibility of publishers and librarians, as guardians of the people's freedom to read, to contest encroachments upon that freedom by individuals or groups seeking to impose their own standards or tastes upon the community at large.

It is inevitable in the give and take of the democratic process that the political, the moral, or the aesthetic concepts of an individual or group will occasionally collide with those of another individual or group. In a free society individuals are free to determine for themselves what they wish to read, and each group is free to determine what it will recommend to its freely associated members. But no group has the right to take the law into its own hands, and to impose its own concept of politics or morality upon other members of a democratic society. Freedom is no freedom if it is accorded only to the accepted and the inoffensive.

7. It is the responsibility of publishers and librarians to give full meaning to the freedom to read by providing books that enrich the quality and diversity of thought and expression. By the exercise of this affirmative responsibility, they can demonstrate that the answer to a "bad" book is a good one, the answer to a "bad" idea is a good one.

The freedom to read is of little consequence when the reader cannot obtain matter fit for that reader's purpose. What is needed is not only the absence of restraint, but the positive provision of opportunity for the people to read the best that has been thought and said. Books are the major channel by which the intellectual inheritance is handed down, and the principal means of its testing and growth. The defense of the freedom to read requires of all publishers and librarians the utmost of their faculties, and deserves of all citizens the fullest of their support.

We state these propositions neither lightly nor as easy generalizations. We here stake out a lofty claim for the value of the written word. We do so because we believe that it is possessed of enormous variety and usefulness, worthy of cherishing and keeping free. We realize that the application of these propositions may mean the dissemination of ideas and manners of expression that are repugnant to many persons. We do not state these propositions in the comfortable belief that what people read is unimportant. We believe rather that what people read is deeply important; that ideas can be dangerous; but that the suppression of ideas is fatal to a democratic society. Freedom itself is a dangerous way of life, but it is ours.
